

A Cheese Sandwich for John Lennon

First person true stories about the emerging music scene in post war Merseyside, UK, as experienced by Liverpool-born author, Maire E. McMahon

'A Cheese Sandwich for John Lennon' takes the reader on a humorous, real life journey back to a gritty era when Liverpool became a hub for emerging Rock n' Roll in Britain. Born in Liverpool during WWII, author Maire E. McMahon begins the journey by revealing her first encounters with Rock n' Roll as she and her pal Bernie discover Buddy Holly through records brought back to Liverpool by merchant sailors. She then gives the reader a wry look at ballroom dancing classes for working class kids, before moving on to a teenage coming of age tale featuring the historic Locarno Ballroom, and an up-close encounter with a budding young skiffle group, The Quarrymen.

The book culminates with a hilarious chance meeting with a hungry young Beatle at Liverpool's Jacaranda club...with an unexpected twist!

About the Author

'A Cheese Sandwich for John Lennon' is Maire McMahon's second book. Based on actual events which she experienced first-hand, the four interlinked stories describe the author's teenage years coming of age during the emerging music scene in 1950's post-war Liverpool.

Maire is currently working on a fiction thriller which is based on mysterious encounters she experienced while teaching school in a village on the coast of Guyana, South America.
